Walker Audit — "You've still got 20% off!" (Skechers Welcome Reminder)

*Date: March 15, 2026 | Campaign: TRG_US_EN_NONMEMWELCOME_2_12022025

--

1. Executive Summary

This is the second send in Skechers' non-member welcome flow — a reminder that a 20% welcome discount (WEL20-C39C3FPRRN, valid through April 10, 2026) is still on the table. The core mechanic is sound: re-nudge a prospect who didn't convert on the first touch. The problem is execution. A doubled-domain merge error lands in the legal copy, thirteen-plus images are served over HTTP and will silently break in most modern email clients, and critical images are missing alt text — meaning a significant portion of recipients likely sees a broken shell with invisible modules. The offer and structure are directionally correct; the technical quality is not.

2. Business Impact Score

*5 / 10

The offer is competitive and the send logic is valid. But widespread image delivery failures and a visible URL bug in legal copy damage deliverability perception and brand credibility. Conversion is being lost to avoidable infrastructure errors, not strategy.

3. What's Working

Subject line creates urgency without being hyperbolic. "You've still got 20% off" is honest, benefit-forward, and earns the open on a second touch.

Promo code is prominently surfaced. Code + CTA appear high in the email body — no hunting required.

Comfort technology callouts are present. Slip-Ins, Cozy Fit, Max Cushioning, Arch Fit — these are Skechers' product differentiation pillars and they're linked correctly over HTTPS.

Utility footer is comprehensive. BNPL (Afterpay, Klarna), Curbside Pickup, Find a Store, App download, SMS opt-in — the right friction-reducers are all present.

Skechers Plus upsell is placed appropriately. Free shipping + returns is a meaningful conversion driver for a first-time buyer sitting on an unused promo code.

4. What's Weak

HTTP image sources are endemic. 13+ images — including the logo, app store badges, social icons, and utility module assets — are served via http://image.emails.skechers.com. Gmail, Outlook, and Apple Mail all block or proxy non-HTTPS images. Many recipients see blank modules where images should render.

Doubled-domain merge error in legal copy. The T&C; reads http://www.skechers.com/www.Skechers.com — a classic template variable that resolved incorrectly. It's in the fine print, but it signals sloppy QA and raises deliverability flags with spam filters that parse URLs.

"SHOP OUR TOP COLLECTIONS" CTA is broken. The link resolves to an unknown URL type — this is a dead click on what should be a primary engagement point.

No meaningful urgency framing in body copy. The subject line does the lifting, but if the hero is broken for image-blocked recipients, there's no reinforcing text in the visible body to drive action.

iGoDigital product recs appear without context. The recommendation module fires but without a headline or framing copy visible in the text layer — if images fail, the product carousel is invisible and the logic block is orphaned.

5. Recommendations

Migrate all image sources to HTTPS immediately. http://image.emails.skechers.com across 13+ assets is a systemic issue — this should be a platform-level fix, not email-by-email patching.

Add descriptive alt text to every image. Hero, product recs, comfort tech tiles, utility icons — all of them. Alt text is the last line of defense when images block.

Fix the "SHOP OUR TOP COLLECTIONS" link before next send. Audit the template variable binding for this CTA.

Fix the doubled-domain T&C; URL. The www.Skechers.com/www.Skechers.com merge error needs a template correction at the source. Low effort, real downside if left.

Add a visible text fallback for the hero module. Even a simple headline like "Your 20% welcome discount expires April 10" as a text element ensures image-blocked recipients get the message.

Add a framing label above the recommendation module. Something like "Picked for you" or "Top styles to try" gives context if the product images render and makes the module feel intentional rather than dropped in.

6. Bottom Line

This email has a legitimate reason to exist and a competitive offer to deliver. The welcome flow strategy is correct. But it's being undermined by a pervasive HTTP image problem that likely breaks the visual experience for a large share of recipients, compounded by a merge error that shouldn't make it out of QA. Fix the infrastructure first; the strategy will carry itself.

7. Evidence

*Overall purpose of the email

Second touch in the non-member welcome series (campaign ID: NONMEMWELCOME_2). Goal is to recover unconverted first-touch recipients with the same 20% discount before it expires. Legitimate re-engagement mechanic.

*Hero / primary value proposition

Code WEL20-C39C3FPRRN with a direct link to skechers.com. Offer clarity is high. The hero image (bcc16007) has no alt text and the CTA text around it isn't recoverable if the image breaks.

*Membership / benefits section

Skechers Plus appears in the utility section with free shipping + returns framing and a "JOIN NOW" CTA linking correctly to the registration page. Well-positioned for a non-member audience, though it's below the fold and competes with a lot of other modules.

*Product discoverability / recommendation modules iGoDigital recs are present (rr/v2 pixel fires). No visible header text or fallback in the plain-text layer. If images don't render, this module contributes nothing. Comfort technology links (Slip-Ins, Cozy Fit, Max Cushioning, Arch Fit) all point to HTTPS destinations and are structurally intact.

*Utility / secondary modules

Nav bar (Women, Men, Kids, Clothing, New Arrivals, Sale), SMS opt-in ("Text SKECHERS to 83828"), iOS/Android app download, Curbside Pickup, Afterpay, Klarna, Find a Store. Coverage is thorough. The App Store and Google Play badge images are HTTP-served and will break. Social icons (Instagram, Facebook, YouTube) same problem.

*Email-to-site continuity

Primary CTA and nav links use ?src=template UTM parameters. Comfort tech links land on correct technology sub-pages. BNPL links point to correct Afterpay and Klarna landing pages. Continuity is structurally sound where links are intact.

*Bugs / friction / clarity issues

http://www.skechers.com/www.Skechers.com — doubled-domain merge error in legal T&C; copy (FAIL)

13 images served over HTTP — expect rendering failures in Gmail, Outlook, Apple Mail

Hero image and 3 additional images have no alt text

"SHOP OUR TOP COLLECTIONS" CTA link resolves to invalid URL type — dead click

Tracking pixel (o.gif) served over HTTP with no alt text — minor but adds to the HTTP signal

SPF/DKIM authentication status unverified via AgentMail relay — deliverability unknown

Business Impact Score: n/a
